The Railway - Cleveland Branch

The Cleveland Branch was built to serve the agricultural area of Redland Bay and to provide seaside access for Brisbane residents and took an indirect route via Wynnum and Manly.

The line from Albert (near Park Road) to Cleveland Central opened on 1 October 1889. A short extension to Cleveland - closer to Cleveland Point - opened on 20 December 1897. The line lost money and in a move, to save bridge reconstruction, was closed on 1 November 1960.

The right of way was retained by the local authority as far as Raby Bay, and the line was rebuilt in stages, opening to Thorneside on 25 September 1982, to Wellington Point as an electric line on 26 July 1986 and Cleveland (just short of the old Raby Bay) on 24 October 1987.

John Kerr: Author of Triumph of Narrow Gauge

With the knowledge of when the railway was due to open, George Gibbs bought a block of land in Mary Street (now Berrima Street) with the intention of building a hotel. On 6 November 1889, just five days after the railway opened, the South Brisbane Licensing Court granted approval for the licensing of the Waterloo Bay Hotel.
